

Foot Calluses: When Your Feet Build Their Own Armor

Not every condition is a pathology. Some conditions serve a purpose. Such is the case with foot calluses.

We might find them unsightly in our modern society. I mean, most of us women wouldn't want callused feet hanging out of our sandals.

But what if we were farmers, on our feet working daily in the fields? Indeed, calluses can be very protective. That's why the body forms them.

Calluses aren't an accident; they're created by design.

The body knows to protect the soft tissue of the foot. The calluses act as a not-so-secret defense mechanism against repetitive friction and pressure. Calluses are a self-generated body armor.

As I said, some people need that protection.

Yet, if the sufferer doesn't need that toughness on the bottom of their feet and if there is no correctable cause for the calluses to exist (we're looking at you, ill-fitting shoes), then we might consider utilizing a homeopathic medicine to address the issue.

Calluses that are unnecessary and unsightly

Most often, in women, the calluses are unacceptable for aesthetic reasons. In that case, we might consider Calc fluor, as one of its keynotes is thickened skin.

Generally, if there's no other pathology – it's simply thickening of the skin – we could employ Calc fluor 12, twice a day, until the affected skin shows improvement.

Calluses that are protective but develop painful cracks

However, even a person who does need the protective toughness of foot calluses can experience undesirable complications. Thickening of the skin that seems irregular, approaching a pathology, might cause us to turn to different homeopathic medicines.

If the skin starts to crack, often painfully, then we might consider Petroleum instead. (I've written more specifically on potency and frequency of Petroleum in "Parched Parts? Consider Petroleum.")

On the other hand, if the calluses not only crack but also ooze – especially if the oozing is honey-colored – then the better homeopathic medicine to consider that has a lot to do with the feet: Graphites.

These are not our only choices for calluses

Common-sense changes in hygiene can also help combat calluses. I discuss this in my 2014 blog post, Let the Skin Be Our Guide. My advice on what to use on the skin still holds true.

Plus, as is generally the case in homeopathy, there is more than one way to cook the bacon. These remedies I mention here are not the only choices. The repertory is filled with suggestions. These are simply the top few.

I discuss other remedies (and other foot conditions) in my Monday Night Live from July 20, 2026. I encourage you to listen and take notes to flesh out your education more fully on the subject.

If you enjoy this content, please share it. Also check out my podcasts, Monday Night Lives, and connect with me on YouTube, Instagram and Facebook.

Pass on the good news of Practical Homeopathy®!

Warmly,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'Joette', with a large, looping flourish at the end.

P.S. If skin issues are a scourge for your family, then take a deeper dive into the topic with my course, Skin, the Ugly Truth: Safe, Effective Treatment of Skin Ailments, Chronic or Acute, with Homeopathy. There, you can discover much more information than there is room to share here on the blog.

And remember – all my Mighties (Joette's Mighty Members) qualify for a 10% discount on course purchases. If you need assistance getting your discount, email contact@practicalhomeopathy.com for more information.

Disclaimer: Joette is not a physician, and the relationship between Joette and her clients, students and followers is not that of prescriber and patient, but that of educator and learner. It is fully the learner's choice whether or not to take advantage of the information Joette presents. Homeopathy doesn't "treat" an illness; it addresses the entire person as a matter of wholeness that is an educational process, not a medical one. In order to be treated or diagnosed, Joette believes that the advice of a holistic physician is in order. Claims based on traditional homeopathic practice, not accepted medical evidence. Not FDA evaluated.

Remedy Cards

Want the important remedy picture for this blog as a pdf?

Build your homeopathic library as searchable files on your computer.

Print them out as convenient cards and keep them together in a book for those times when you don't have your computer handy.

Fill out the form below to download your remedy card

08.09.26 Foot Calluses: When Your Feet Build Their Own Armor

First Name *

Please be sure your first name is correct.

Last Name *

Please be sure your last name is correct.

Email *

Confirm Email *

Captcha

Submit

If you are human, leave this field blank.

Δ