

‘Spurred’ on to Homeopathy by Painful Bone Spurs: 2 Remedies to Remember

After a month of skeletons poised on neighbors' lawns, I was "spurred" on to write about bone spurs.

Most often, bone spurs show up on shin bones and knees. However, an exostosis can also show up in the mouth on the maxillary or mandible (upper or lower jaw bones), and a calcaneal spur can occur on the heel bone. If you've never had one, they're often painful and unsightly.

Homeopathy offers a few medicines for consideration, but in my clinical experience, two remedies are most commonly utilized.

Bone Spurs

Generally, a common homeopathic choice for exostoses occurring anywhere on the body is Calcarea fluorica 12X or C (also known as Calcarea fluorata). Either X or C will work; since it's not a protocol, it doesn't matter. Calc fluor has been historically shown to dissolve bone spurs over time.

Heather, a young girl with a prominent bone spur on her shin, once came to me in my practice. The bump was embarrassing in her daily life but also affected Heather's athleticism. Because the spur was quite tender to the touch, her athletic pursuits held excruciating potential. The fear of that pain caused her not to play as aggressively as she could.

The homeopathic solution took some time – about six months – but her healing was complete. Heather utilized Calc fluor 12X, twice daily, until she was very much better. In fact, the bony prominence completely disappeared. Indeed, once again, Calc fluor was clinically proven right before our eyes.

HEEL SPUR

Calcaneal Spurs (Heel Spurs)

Bone spurs in the feet, such as calcaneal spurs, may feel especially painful on the first movement in the morning. The pain may improve slightly as the movement continues. However, it can possibly regress if the foot is overutilized. For instance, walking or standing too long may cause the pain to increase.

For this type of bone spur, I generally elect Symphytum officinale 200C \(or CK\) mixed with Rhus toxicodendron 30C. (These two separate medicines can be taken at the same time by mixing them together in the mouth. Alternatively, the remedies may be purchased already mixed together during the manufacturing process if one has access to OHM Pharma.)

This Banerji Protocol, generally utilized twice daily until very much better, pulls double duty. Symphytum is our go-to medicine for bone conditions, while Rhus tox addresses the function of the ligaments and muscles around the heel spur.

Win-win!

When to Stop

As with all homeopathics, knowing when to stop utilizing the medicines is crucial. You often hear me say, “Until very much better.” But what does that mean?

When the condition is so much better that it’s no longer obvious or at the forefront of your mind, it’s time to stop. The condition is very much better.

It’s the same principle adhered to by folks who use conventional pharmaceuticals. They wouldn’t take an Advil if they didn’t have a headache. They wouldn’t take cough medicine if they didn’t have a cough. They wouldn’t take Tagamet if they didn’t have indigestion.

Remember: Homeopathy is also medicine. It is only taken when necessary to address a condition. Homeopathy is not a vitamin or a supplement. We don't take medicines ad infinitum. If the condition reappears later, one can always restart the homeopathic schedule that was previously successful or pivot to another medicine more tightly fitting the current symptoms.

I address this subject more thoroughly in my blog post, When to Stop. I urge you to make that post required reading. It will help improve your ability to make these judgment calls as you observe the homeopathic medicine act.
