Thanksgiving 2026: America Celebrates Our Truest Virtues

As we approach Thanksgiving, we celebrate two of America's truest virtues – gratitude and family.

But Thanksgiving is also the celebration of a glorious, unapologetic feast of real food made in a real kitchen by a real mother or grandmother.

Think of it: a massive, home-roasted bird dripping with protein, crowned with crispy skin and drowned in fatty gravy. That's the stuff worth giving thanks for.

My friends, Thanksgiving, for all its recognized attributes, is also a celebration of the epitome of women's work in the kitchen … where we shine best.

Indeed, it’s our glorious yearly showcase.

Ladies, relish preparing your meals with your mother, aunt, sister-in-law or daughter by your side. For I assure you, your love will be baked right in. Your family will experience not only a delicious feast but also the gratitude of a loving family … which is the heart and true strength of our nation.

And as a personal note, I give thanks for you … thanks for choosing to be part of our community. My mission has long been to get the word of Practical Homeopathy® out to every family across the globe. You have helped make it possible, and my gratitude is boundless.

Warmly,

P.S. If a bit of overindulgence becomes uncomfortable over Thanksgiving weekend, I direct you to a blog post from a few years ago with a few Thanksgiving must-have remedies.

P.P.S. We usually don’t do this, but to show my gratitude, I’d like to offer a Black Friday incentive from 12:01 a.m. on Friday, November 27, through Sunday, November 29, at 11:59 p.m. EST.

Receive a 5% discount on any Protocol Course from my Learning Center – including Drug-Free Family and the Survivalist Guide.

Plus, wouldn't those on your gift list prefer to receive health-freedom education over another tie or pair of pajamas? To help you give the gift of Practical Homeopathy® this year, I'll also offer 5% off gift card purchases.

Note: Only one discount may be applied to any purchase.
