

The Value of Ipecac

Ipecac is valuable. Aside from being a 12-point Scrabble word – or even more if you place it well – Ipecac is an essential medicine when prepared homeopathically. Consequently, Ipecacuanha \(Ipecac\) should be included in any well-curated homeopathy kit.

You may have noticed I included it in my recent blog, 17 Homeopathic Medicines for Travel.

On my blog over the years, I have taught Ipecac for several conditions. I wrote about it for:

Nausea from supplements – How Embarrassing

Nausea from stomach flu – Thanksgiving Traditions

Morning sickness – Birthing Part Two: The Premier Remedy for Childbirth and a Few More

Dysentery – Disasters, Diarrhea, Dysentery

Gagging cough – Ipecac: The Cough That Nags and Gags

Asthmatic cough – Four Homeopathic Medicines for Asthma

Smoke inhalation – Where There's Fire, There's Smoke

My friends, if you scroll down this page, you may notice there is no Remedy Card with this blog. That's by design. Rather than handing you a fish today, I want to teach you to fish for all the tomorrows.

Several of the blog posts listed above carry their own Remedy Cards regarding Ipecac. So, click on each of the links above and read the articles to learn more about potencies and frequency of utilization. Download the Remedy Cards for each post that offers them. (My older blog posts don't all have them.)

I promise that going through each of the listed blog posts will help you more thoroughly understand the conditions for which Ipecac should be considered. If one puts all those blogs together, the profile for Ipecac becomes clear. It's a medicine that focuses on the lungs and the stomach.

Sometimes, those two areas are linked in one condition, in which case one's argument for Ipecac would be even stronger. But both organs need not be affected by a singular condition before considering Ipecac. As always, when making a medicine choice, I advise doing further reading on the remedy's entry in a materia medica, such as A Materia Medica: Practical Homeopathy® for Busy Families.

Over the past 15 months, we have certainly amassed a robust stockpile of homeopathic medicines through my blog posts, haven't we?
