We rescued our dog, Katie, from a home that could no longer care for her. She came with her own set of problems that we had to battle one at a time. The most difficult was when Katie continuously urinated on our living room rug almost daily. We took her to the vet who said she had a urinary tract infection and put her on antibiotics. The antibiotics did nothing; Katie continued to mess on the carpet almost daily. We patiently continued the vet's recommendation, with no improvement in Katie's condition. We took her back to the vet who then informed us that it had progressed to a kidney infection. But how could this be, wasn't she on antibiotics? He gave us more antibiotics, stronger this time. Katie stayed the same; there was no change. I was not about to give up, so I called Joette, knowing that she had helped my husband with his health problems the previous year. We took Katie off the antibiotic; after all, it was doing nothing anyway. She suggested a remedy, and we gave it to Katie. Within 3 days, Katie's problems were over. She has not messed on the carpet since. That was 4 years ago.
