Early one morning, I went out to my barn to collect one of my ailing feline friends in much need of dental work. As I picked him up, he bumped his mouth, causing him great pain. He proceeded to embed his teeth into my wrist. I did not wish to loosen him; catching him again would not be an option. So, with Thatcher hanging from my arm, I headed to the house. Moments before I reached the house, he let go. I went in the house, cleaned up, and went to work. As the morning progressed, my arm began throbbing. By lunch, I was beginning to show signs of a fever and nausea. I returned home, began soaking my arm in hot water with Celtic salt and Calendula tincture.

I put a call into Joette and she reminded me of what she had taught us in class so and I took Hypericum 200C on the hour and Ledum 200c on the half hour. I continued soaking my arm, taking my remedies and sleeping lots.

After the third day, the symptoms began to lessen. I backed off the remedies to a couple of times a day as well as soaking my arm. Each day everything looked better and better. At the end of a few months, the scars were mostly invisible. Now there are none.

Infection gone, wound healed. Homeopathy Works!!!!
