

Homeopathy is

OK, show of hands. Who here is a do-it yourselfer? How about an independent thinker? How about someone who just can't bear to spend money on unnecessary items? Well, if you fit one or all three of these personality types, you might want to consider taking full control of your health care. The best way to do this? Learn enough homeopathy to take on just about any illness that comes your family's way. You know, bee stings, fevers, menstrual cramps, colds and flus.

Two years ago Maria bought a couple of homeopathy books, CD's and took a simple class on how to cure her family of common ailments. Today, she is the mainstay of her family's healthcare provider. She has licked ear infections in her daughter, relentless vomiting in her son and insomnia in her husband. Even her in-laws have asked for help for minor arthritis problems. She has taken her children to the doctor only because her school district requires it, but always with pride that they no longer need his expertise. Instead, now SHE is the expert. Homeopathy – the empowering medicine.
