Joette Says…

Health was never like this and more is the pity. The health and wellbeing of our kids is paramount, yet we have allowed antibiotics, analgesics and a myriad of other questionable meds to be administered to the youth of America. Only a generation ago, our grandparents would have been suspicious of a drug that had a small print warning of side effects. Today, we think nothing of subjecting our children to these atrocious drugs. It's time to turn the tide. Think as independently as possible. Think homeopathy. It takes years of study to become a certified homeopath. Yet, a parent can easily accomplish seemingly miraculous work at curing her child of ear infections, fevers and even injuries with a small commitment to learning basic homeopathy. It is not unusual for a mom to eliminate the use of antibiotics and painkillers from her child's world with homeopathic remedies. Consider becoming your family's healthcare provider. Homeopathy. Medicine of empowerment.
