

Patricia Mendelssohn, San Francisco, CA

Dear Joette,

I wanted to follow-up with you and let you know how wonderfully well my daughter, Dina is doing now. It was about a year ago that I called you, terrified because of her visual and aural hallucinations and withdrawn aspect.

You taught me how to use homeopathic remedies. Initially Dina refused to take the remedy.

*At a certain point, she no longer wanted to talk about the visual and aural hallucinations with me, and I respected that; a few months ago, she told me that they had completely stopped!

Today is my daughter's first day at school and I can't tell you how abundantly grateful I felt, sending her off, smiling happily. This is a bright, creative, gifted, wonderfully kind and empathetic kid with a bright future ahead of her.

I cannot fathom what we went through a year ago, with neurologists telling us she was mentally ill, suffering from a form of psychosis, and in need of psychiatric care!

The only changes we made are the ones I mentioned: homeopathy, introducing Biokult probiotic along with fermented cod liver oil, and removing her from certain exposures.

Also, her mild asthma and allergies seem to be contained!

Mental illness still has an incredible stigma, and no one we know would ever guess what Dina has been through.

If we'd taken a different route, we could have subjected her to prolonged psychiatric meds, traumatized her, made her feel flawed as a human being.

Instead, she is vibrantly happy.

The only problem with using an effective remedy like Anacardium is that it appears to have worked so well and so quickly that Dina's grandparents doubt what we suffered. Also, what we were up against and they feel comfortable imagining that we had overreacted to something minor. I know differently. I hope that my experience will help others!

Thanks from my heart,