

Home with Homeopathy Tip #54

“Where is my Aconite? WHERE?”

When you’ve had a shock, don’t compound your angst by not knowing where your medicine is!

Stay organized ... ready for anything.

Since we initially discussed organizing your remedies, I’ve received so many ingenious methods from students that I simply must devote a couple more daily tips to your contributions! Be sure to zoom in on the photos to fully appreciate their brilliance!

Linda B. runs a cage-free cat sanctuary with a population of 100 cats — plus or minus. She provides the bulk of their medical care with homeopathy!

“These are actually ammunition storage boxes, but they work ‘purrfectly’ for storing remedies. I tried a variety of different sizes before finding that Berry’s SWM 414s are the best. I buy mine from Sportsman’s Warehouse. I believe they are about $4 each.”

Ivonne P. has advice for organization both at home and online! Clever solutions ...

“I’m using some IKEA small wooden drawers I’ve had since my kids were little, and boxes for my travel kits and cell salts.

Each drawer is labeled by first to last remedy in the drawer so I can find what I need easily.

I’ve had a lot of my remedies for 20+ years. As I’m constantly adding to the collection, I decided to leave plenty of room in each drawer for future additions because I was getting tired of having to reorganize everything all the time!

I also keep a list of all remedies on Google Drive for my own stash and that of my grown kids and elderly parents. That way, I always know what they have on hand when they need something.”

Linda S. offers two tips in one ... one for you and one for your friends and family!

“I love seeing photos of others’ travel kits! Mine works really well, too. It currently has 31 remedies:

I use a little taster spoon to extract a pellet.

This tin is small enough to carry in my purse and keeps my remedies protected from my cell phone.

Lastly, I had some stickers made that say, “Homeopathy for Everyone” and I give remedies to family and friends in their own tin with their name on it:”

Now that is a great way to pass on the good news of homeopathy!! Way to go, Linda!

We are getting through this together ...with aplomb!

Links:

We only provide links to exact materials if the student provided the links.

You're most likely reading this at home. You know how I know? Because we're all most likely at home right now.

Perhaps you've been asked to work remotely, or your city has called on you to shelter in place. Perhaps you're home alone, or maybe you're hunkered down with your children as their schools are closed. Perhaps you could use some outside help.

This is my daily series, "At Home with Homeopathy," — tips to help you manage the day-to-day difficulties of recent events. I'll send you a homeopathy tip every day ... for as long as we're all cooped up at home.

If you've missed earlier tips, you can now find the "Daily Home with Homeopathy Tips – email archive" located on our Community Page. Go to my main page at JoetteCalabrese.com and, under "Free Resources," click on "Free Community." Or you can log in or join from this link: <https://joettecalabrese.com/join/>

You may need to create a password and username. (We had to do this to keep spammers away.) There you will find the daily tip email as a searchable .pdfs — as well much, much more. I think you will be happy with the resources there for free.

In the coming days, I'll be sending additional tips and suggestions. I hope we'll be able to better endure this unprecedented time by working together.

In fact, if you have any tips to share, please send them to my team member tracey@practicalhomeopathy.com . She will compile them for me. You might see your advice shared with our group — with proper credit given, of course! As you might expect, my team's resources are stretched to the max, now made worse with my push to get an email of helpful tips out every day. Replies may be delayed. Please send tips and suggestions only; we are unable to answer questions at this email address.

Let's get through this together, shall we?

The Author disclaims all liability for any loss or risk, personal or otherwise, incurred as a consequence of use of any material in this article.

This information is not a substitute for professional medical advice, diagnosis or treatment.